FIVE DAYS TO GET A JURY.

THE TWELFTH MAN ON THE HEEL OF THE LAST CHALLENGE.

Mr. Beach Tossing Postes to the Press of

New York-Now for a Struggle which will Interest the Politicians. The selection of a jury to try John Scannell for the shooting of Thomas Donohue was resumed yesterday. Judge Brady took his seat at twenty minutes to 11. The prisoner, his mother, sister, and brother entered the court room some time before. Counsel were duly in their places. Mr. Sparks shook up the box containing the names of the jurors, and the tussel

Alfred Ivers was first called. He had read the newspaper accounts, and gave credit to the attachés of the press for their indefatigable exertions in endeavoring to secure the facts. He had an impression that Scannell was guilty; could decide impartially. He could not satisfactorily explain his feelings to counsel, and said that he was so confused he could not unlerstand. He was excused.

John Joseph Shea thought Scannell guilty of wilful murder. "That," said Mr. Beach, "is the opinion of Donohue's friends." The juror

John H. Aunspaugh held an opinion that would influence his action in the jury box. Col. Spencer looked at one of his brother counselors and significantly tapped his forehead. The juror

Thomas Boylston had an opinion that could be removed by the same evidence that formed it-the newspapers. [Laughter.] He had no opinion as to either the prisoner's guilt or inocence. He was a livery stable keeper and undetaker.

Col. Spencer said that that was an occupation which made a man so familiar with death as almost to disqualify him acting as a juror in a sapital case. The juror was challenged peremptorily by the prosecution.

James T. Young, Joseph Jacobs, and Andrew Mervin, having strong opinions, were excused.

John M. Moffit had formed a general opinion that the prisoner was guilty. He had conversed about the case, and said that it resembled a Corsican vendetta. It would take more testimony to convince him of the prisoner's innocence than if he held no opinion. He was challenged to the favor. As the testimony on the trial would be sworn, it would have more weight than newspaper reforts.

Mr. Beach thought that the Judge's ruling on the principal cause would give the triers a false impression. In the challenge to the principal cause the Court determined only the legal effect, whether the juror was entirely indifferent. If the triers saw that the juror was blased they must reject him. The juror said that he was was not prejudiced, and yet he also said that it would take more evidence to satisfy him. It that was being perfectly indifferent, then the defence must submit.

The Judge said that the triers must decide whether the impression was such as to disqualify the juror.

The triers found the challenge not true, and the defence challenged peremptorily.

Joseph Foss did not know and could not tell whether he was blased. He was dismissed.

Henry H. Richardson, bookseller of 22 Vesey street, had read nothing about the killing in the newspapers, knew nothing about the killing in the heads senthere was

A SHOOTING MATCH SOMEWHERE.

A SHOOTING MATCH SOMEWHERE. He had no scruples about hanging a man. The prisoner's counsel and friends consulted. The prosecution challenged peremptorily.

Robert S. Swayze was excused, having formed a strong opinion.

Charles F. S hirmer had no opinion at all, al-

Astrong opinion.
Charles F. S hirmer had no opinion at all, although he had read the newspapers.
Here Mrs. Scannell entered the court room, kissed her husband, and sat down beside him.
The juror believed that Donohue was shot but did not believe that Scannell shot him. He never believed anything which he did not see. Ile thought he did believe that Scannell shot Donohue, but required evidence to convince him that it was so. He didn't believe anything without evidence. He never believed anything that he read. He believed his Bible. He believed the prisoner was guilty, but had nothing sgainst him. He did not know Donohue or his riends. He had seen Scannell before. He did not know J. Dolam. He knew Gabriel Case by sight. He had never been in Bradley's livery stable. The juror was dismissed by the prosecution.
Diedrich Schlimmermeyer and John J. Sutton.

Diedrich Schlimmermeyer and John J. Sutton were excused.
Judge Ingraham entered the court room, and announced Judge Boardman's decision in the stokes case, a full report of which appears elsewhere.

Joseph Queripet, M. Day, Walter H. Goodmough, P. Winters, and Rickason Stillwell were steused.

DONORUE'S FRIENDS NOT WANTED.

Isanc G. Bond had an opinion, but could give a verdict without prejudice. He had known bonobue, having had three or four business transactions with him.

The Judge thought that they didn't want any man on the jury who had known Donohue. The juror was excused by coffsent.

John Lacy, having a strong opinion, was excused.

cissed.

Joseph Rosen never heard of any one's having oeen shot on Broadway and Twenty-eighth street until yesterday morning. He did not know what capital punishment was. He had no objection to hanging a man for murder. He was challenged peremptorily by the prosecution.

John Byron, who had an opinion, was excused.

Here Col. Spencer nodded, smiled, and kissed Here Col. Spencer nodded, smiled, and assect his hand to a reporter.

Win. H. Wells had a very strong opinion, but he could throw that aside if he had evidence to warrant such action. He would not convict on the opinion which he held.

Mr. Heach (pettishly)—I can't make the juror understand.

Juror—That may be owing to my want of brains.

brains.
Mr. Beach-Perhaps the want of brains is on Mr. Beach—Perhaps the want of brains is on my part.

The Judge said that, as there was so much doubt, the jury had better be excused.

James L. Jones, described as a hotel keeper, of 42 Broadway, was out of the city at the time of the shooting of Donohue. He knew nothing about it, and had made no inquiry. He had scruples at to hauging. He did not knew J. J. Bradley. He did not keep a hotel. It was a restaurant. [Here one of the counsel smiled, na though pleasant recollections were stirred, and said "Oh, yes!"] He conversed on the dase last evening, after he had been summoned on the jury. He was chellenged peremptorily by the defence.

Henry E. Hart had 'an opinion which would not influence him. He would consider it his duty to disabuse his mind of that opinion when he entered the jury box.

INSTRUCTIONS OBEYED.

INSTRUCTIONS OBEYED.

The prisoner's counsel and family consented together long and earnestly. Then Mr. Beach said, "I am instructed to excuse him."

Daniel L. Hannock had an opinion, but could conscientiously say that he had no bias. He would not require any additional evidence to remove the impression. He had been acquainted with Florence Scannell. (Here Mrs. Scannell, Sr., leaned forward and listened attentively.) A number of Florence's friends were the juror's friends also. INSTRUCTIONS OBEYED.

Judge Brady said that the juror ought to be excused.

He was accepted by the defence, but challenged peremptorily by the prosecution.

Peter D. Sturgis and Conis Asch were excused. Chas. D. Eacfer had an opinion which would not influence him as a juror. He was a chair maker in the Seventh Ward. He was not acquainted with any gentleman who formerly carried on chair making in that ward. He did not know Win. M. Tweed, or Barney Keenan, or John Ingersoll. He belonged to no political organization. He knew none of Donohue's friends. He did not belong to the Oriental Club. He regarded the prisoner before the law as though he was innocent. He was challenged peremptorily by the defence.

Henry S. Mack, clothier, 59 West Forty-sixth street, had an opinion which would not influence him. He knew of nothing which incapacitated him as a juror. He had no scruples as to hanging.

The prisoner's wife bent over and whispered to Mr. Beach. Mr. Beach said, "We accept."

The District Attorney scrutinized the juror for nearly three minutes. Then he said, "We are content," and the juror was sworn in at twenty-five minutes to two. Judge Brady said that the juror ought to be toused.

The jury then answered to their names as follows; Samuel Dreyfus, 151 East Fifty-fifth street, gentle man. 2. James M. Quigley, 34 West Fifteenth street, mer-3. James C. Wells, 227 West Thirty-eighth street, mer-

3. James U. Weils, ser vices, salesman.
4. David Nile, 48 Walker street, salesman.
5. John J. Brage, 22 Deabroases street, fruits.
6. Allan B. Terry, 226 West Twenty-ninth street, clerk.
7. Theodore E. Studley, 28 Park place, merchant.
6. George E. Smith, 15 East Thirty-eighth street, watches.
9. Henry Krewolf, 231 West Thirty-fourth street, printer. printer.

10. James M. Linnard, 41 South street, merchant.

11. John L. Shuyerland, 60 West Nineteenth street, anotary.

12. Henry S. Mack, 69 West Forty-sixth street, clothier.

Mr. Phelps would have to throw himself on the discretion of the Court. He did not know whether any of the jury objected to sitting on saturday. Saturday.

The foreman said that he would like to keep the Sabbath. The foreman said that he would like to keep the Sabbath.

Mr. Phelps suggested that his Honor adjourn the court to Monday, so as to avoid keeping the jury together two idle days.

Mr. Beach urged the propriety of this course. He had noticed several articles in one of the leading newspapers of this city calculated, he thought, to be injurious to the defendant. If they were not designed, they seemed to him well conceived to create prejudice against his sounsel, the defendant, and the principles which coverned them in selecting the jury. He thought the articles reflected on the character of the jury which had been approved by the defence, the District Attorney, and the Court. If, under the the suggestions of his Honor, the press, whose opinions he generally respected and whose influence he recognized, would not refrain from these injurious and slanderous attacks upon the defendant and his counsel, he hoped his Honor would instruct the jury not to pay attention to articles of that character or allow their perusal of things of that nature in the press of the city. Judge Brady said that he believed the press had abstained from all comments on the case, He had seen none of the articles to which counsel referred. He then cautioned the jury, and the court adjourned until Monday.

The Missouri Senatorial Bribery The Missouri Senatorial Bribery.

St. LOUIS, Feb. 14.—The Republican this morning, referring to the minority report on the subject of the Senatorial bribery case submitted to the House yesterday, says that it seems from the report that very important statements before the committee have been concealed from the public, and adds that the report will more than ever convince the people of Missouri that this investigation has been an exceedingly superficial, and in vindication of Col. Bogy a worse than worthless one. We once more demand in behalf of Col. Bogy's reputation, and in behalf of the Democracy of this State, that the case be taken up again, and deals with in a manner becoming grown up men.
